

Discernment Grid This grid is an attempt to help you discern the truthfulness or trustworthiness of a “Christian” resource (book, magazine article, speaker etc). Spend some time in prayer and then begin!

Part 1: Basic Identification

This section aims to simply to gather basic information about the resource.

Resource:

Note the name of the article, book or sermon

Date:

When was it published or presented?

Author / Speaker:

Who wrote or presented resource?

Endorsements:

Who has endorsed the resource? (check who recommends resource in front & back of book, who has shared it on-line etc.)

Info on Author / Speaker:

Do a quick internet search on presenter and note any church affiliations (church name, denomination), non-profit affiliations, and any interesting biographical information.

Info on Resource: Do a quick internet search on reputable websites to see if there are any reviews on this resource. Suggested sites are Gospel Coalition, Tim Challies Book Reviews, Books and Culture, Christianity Today, Plugged In, Discerning Reader.org.

Part 2: First Impressions

This section aims to help you identify the emphasis and underlying worldview of the resource

Prominence of Scripture in Resource:

Does the resource seem to consist primarily of the author’s / speaker’s ideas, with bible verses or passages being used to support their ideas? OR is the author / speaker’s discussion centered in scripture, explaining how the Bible addresses an issue or situation? This question is more directly applicable to a non-fiction or teaching resources and may not be directly applicable to a fiction book which may discuss ideas without directly quoting scripture.

Translations of Scripture in Resource:

Note which translation(s) the resource quotes. The ESV, NIV, NASB, NLT, and New King James are highly respected translations. The Message is a paraphrase (not translation) and therefore is more useful as a devotional than a teaching tool.

General “tone” of the book

What is the general tone of the book: Encouraging, harsh, rebellious, informative, divisive? Does the author / speaker present ideas with an air of humility and conviction or superiority and criticism?

Attitude towards God in Resource:

Does the author talk about God in words which communicate respect and awe for God’s holiness, and a desire to have his/her mind transformed by God and conformed to His will? OR does the author have a casual or flippant attitude towards God.

Centrality of the Gospel

Is the story of Jesus’s life, death and resurrection central to the book’s content - informing people’s motivations and actions?

Attitude towards the Church in Resource:

Jesus Christ died for the church, and His people are considered “His bride” (Ephesians 5:25-27). Does the resource demonstrate love for / concern for / respect for the church?

Gut check

Is there anything that feels a bit “off” but you aren’t really sure why?!

Answering these basic questions may be enough to help you discern that a resource may not be particularly helpful. If you are still not sure and want to investigate more, dig deeper!

This section aims to help you identify how accurately the author / speaker is engaging with scripture and theology

B. Does the author seem to agree with or understand the core beliefs of the Christian Church?
